

I pay for my satellite radio, and therefore it should be beyond the FCC's reach. The FCC can control what is on the public radio stations, but not the stations for which I pay to listen. As long as satellite radio has customers, they are allowed to broadcast whatever they want, including traffic and weather. Unless the ban includes The Weather Channel, it is bogus, and should be dismissed.